The future of liberty has never been brighter. That's because the future will be created by today's youth, and this is the libertarian generation.

A majority of American youth today both support same-sex marriage and consider terms like “free markets,” “entrepreneurship,” and “limited government” favorably. 81 percent of the Turkish protesters self-identify as libertarian.

The Economist* is running headlines saying that British youth are more classically liberal than ever before, and citing SFL's work as justification.

Five years ago, there was almost no libertarian student activism taking place on campuses. Today, Students For Liberty has over 900 groups across the world, trains hundreds of leaders each year, organizes dozens of conferences for thousands of students, and provides more resources than anyone has done before. This is not just a moment. For SFL, this is the start of something much greater.

SFL's work is strongest in North America, where we are planning 18 Regional Conferences, have more than doubled our Campus Coordinator Program to 159 students, and are making significant investments to develop the next generation of leaders of liberty. However, our success is certainly not limited to North America. Even in areas where activism is dangerous, young people from around the world are embracing the ideas of liberty and taking advantage of the resources and opportunities Students For Liberty has to offer.

Currently, SFL is building a support structure for our Venezuelan International Executive Board member who became a political exile this past month due to his outspoken opposition to the existing regime.

Two years ago, when he first applied to SFL's Campus Coordinator program, I asked, "Are you sure you want to do this? It could get dangerous for you." His response was succinct, but inspiring: "I'm going to do it with or without you. I just think I could do it better with you." With the support of SFL, he organized a 70 person libertarian student conference in Venezuela this past January and is spearheading the formation of Estudiantes por la Libertad across the Spanish-speaking Americas. I am proud of his perseverance and proud that SFL is building a structure to help students like him around the world.

By giving students the opportunity to learn how to organize groups, host events, write articles, and become effective public speakers, we are preparing them to become strong alumni dedicated to liberty who will change the world.

SFL alumni are incredible. They are working at libertarian nonprofits, gaining admission to top graduate programs, forming PACs, becoming policy analysts, and starting their own companies. SFL co-founder Samuel Eckman recently graduated from University of Chicago Law School and will be clerking for Justice Antonin Scalia in a year. Jared Fuller, 2009-2010 Executive Board member, is now a serial entrepreneur running successful companies that allow him to help finance the movement and provide high-quality services tailored to libertarians' needs. One of his companies, Market Aces, designed websites for many prominent libertarian groups, including SFL.

I often hear from supporters that if we lose this generation to statism, there may never be a chance to recover. If we want to reach a whole generation, we need to reach more than a few hundred students through one-off programs.

We need to reach hundreds of thousands of students around the world and develop the infrastructure for long-term growth. SFL is doing just that.

We are going to run more programs, train more students, and have more of an impact than ever before. With your help, we are going to create a free academy and a free society; nothing less.

STUDENT LEADERSHIP STRUCTURE

SFL adopted a new leadership structure to support the increasing internationalization.

There are two things that change the world: people and ideas.

The cause of liberty has the right ideas; academics invested heavily in developing them for generations. There have been and are some exceptional leaders of liberty, but there are not yet enough of them to win the fight for freedom. Students For Liberty

INCREASE IN SFL LEADERS
FROM 2012 TO 2013

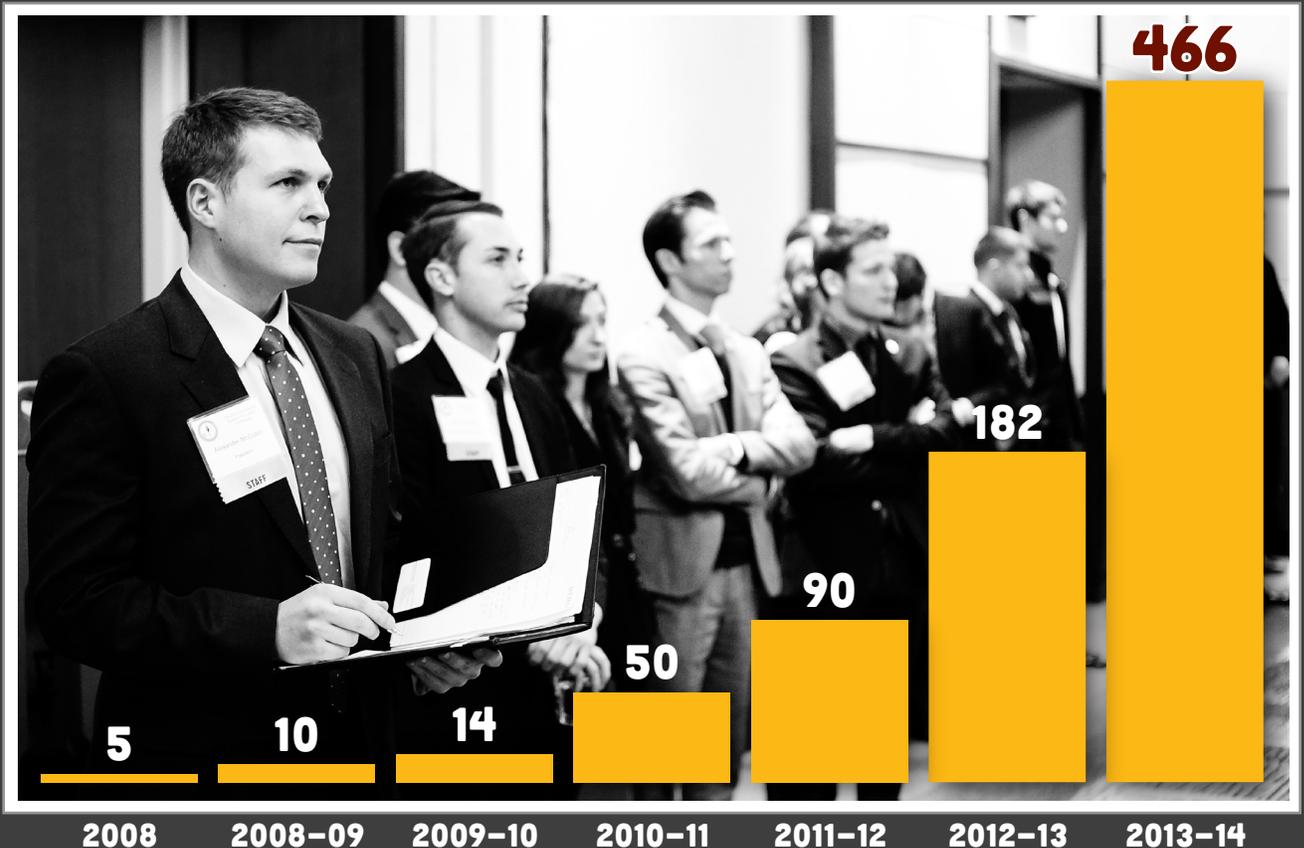

is training the next generation of student leaders to bring libertarian ideas to the forefront.

Students For Liberty's training emphasizes leadership today. SFL's programs are largely driven by the hundreds of student leaders who organize conferences, distribute resources, train other student leaders, and take care of the day-to-day activities of the organization.

SFL provides leadership training that students can apply to any field. The introductory leadership programs such as the North American Campus Coordinator Program and European Local Coordinator Program teach students how to organize events, engage in marketing, and become effective public speakers. When students have mastered the basics, they can apply for advanced leadership positions to gain more training and take on more responsibilities. Whether young people want to become advocates of liberty in academia, politics, nonprofits, journalism, business, or elsewhere, SFL provides them with the skills they need to do so.

LEADERSHIP FORUMS

Students For Liberty sponsors Leadership Forums each fall and spring. The Forums serve as a clearinghouse for the exchange of best practices and the development of leadership skills in the student movement for liberty. Leadership Forums provide a small, informal, and intimate environment to network with fellow student leaders and learn from their successes and failures.

The forums also give students a great opportunity to create lasting relationships — both professional and personal — that will ultimately have the effect of strengthening the student movement.

Usually meeting twice per semester, student leaders of groups from various regions in North America come together to discuss ways to improve and coordinate their efforts. Since experience amongst each leader varies, the topics range from the basics of the effect of strengthening the student movement. For example, SFL saw a spike in attendance at the Regional Conferences in regions with strong Forums.

One striking detail about the Forums is that they are completely student-run and operated. The Leadership Forum initiative is a grassroots effort which each region uniquely crafts to address their own specific needs. A number of students have begun to think of their Forums as pro-liberty mutual aid societies. For example, some Forums have proposed pooling resources to provide travel scholarships and start-up grants in order to help newly forming local groups.

Over the past year, SFL's Leadership Forum initiative has been taken to new heights. SFL leaders have hosted an unprecedented 22 Forums with a total of over 300 student leaders in attendance at a cost of just over $10 per student. In the coming year, Students For Liberty Campus Coordinators will each be equipped with the training they need to create successful Forums in their regions.

MORE THAN JUST A NETWORK...

“Students For Liberty made me into the individual I am today. I will never regret that day in 2010 when I randomly decided to attend the Arizona Regional Conference. Without SFL, I would never have discovered that I was a libertarian. SFL is more than an organization... It is a family of like-minded people who will change the world.”

MORE THAN JUST LEADERSHIP TRAINING...

“Students For Liberty has given me countless opportunities to grow as a leader of the cause of liberty. I believe that individual liberty is essential to human happiness for all people, and SFL has given me the tools to fight for liberty on campus. Their training, conferences, and resources have allowed me to build up a strong student group at Michigan State University. This group serves as a community for students who, like me, are fed up with the big government status quo. My time as an SFL leader has allowed me to bring more students into the libertarian movement and develop great friendships along the way. I am so proud to be a part of the booming student movement for liberty that SFL is fostering.”

Student groups are the building blocks of the student movement for liberty. By helping students start new groups and grow existing ones, SFL is able to provide safe spaces for students to learn about the ideas of liberty on campus and hubs to promote the ideas to new individuals.

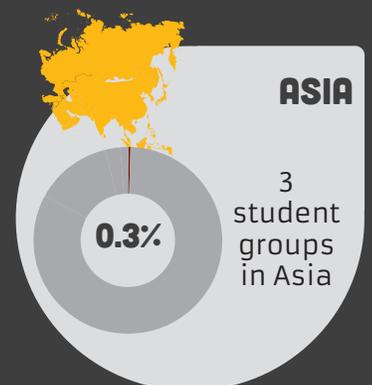

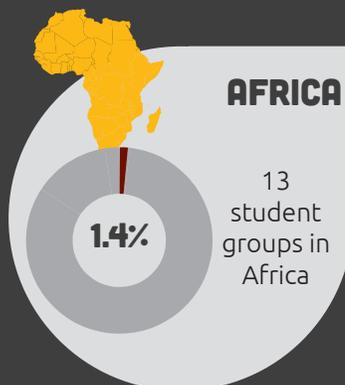

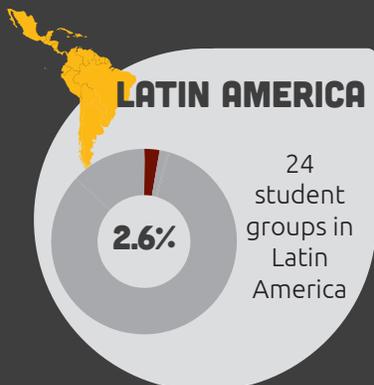

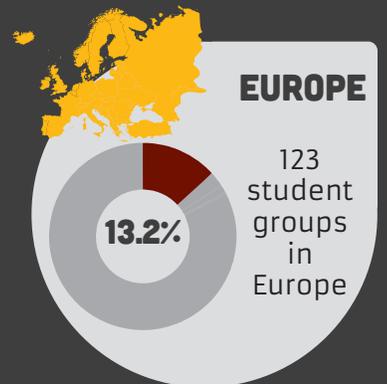

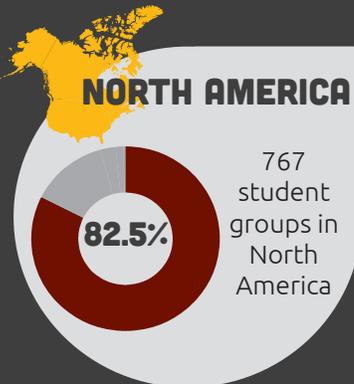

NUMBER OF STUDENT GROUPS IN THE SFL NETWORK

GEOGRAPHY OF SFL NETWORK

What started as a small conference for like-minded students in New York City is now an organization spanning all six continents*. And we are just getting started.

*While there is not yet a student group in Australia, SFL has a Charter Team member on the continent for the 2013-2014 academic year.

WHAT DO STUDENT GROUPS DO?

ESTUDIANTES POR LA LIBERTAD ECUADOR

Members of EPLL Ecuador at the Guayaquil Conference

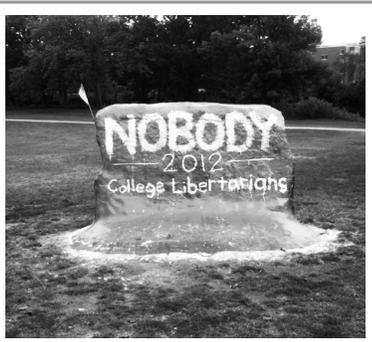

EPLL Ecuador has become a forum of support for pro-liberty students in Ecuador. In a country where little to no student activism for liberty existed, EPLL has managed to successfully organize and rally students around their events. The most impressive of which was the 150 person per day conference in Guayaquil. EPLL Ecuador members had to use a lot of personal funds and depend on the little institutional support they could find, but they managed to pull off an astounding event and attract intense demand. These students are true entrepreneurs for liberty in their country.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

The strong libertarian movement at Michigan State University is made up of a unified membership of over 30 students with two leadership structures: a College Libertarians club and a Young Americans for Liberty chapter. The Michigan State College Libertarians have brought several notable names to campus, including Ron Paul who addressed 4,000 people, and Tom Woods who spoke on Meltdown. They hosted two civil liberties graveyards in the spring and fall, hosted a marijuana policy debate and co-hosted a “Know Your Rights” event with Michigan State Students for Sensible Drug Policy. Additionally they hosted an “After the Welfare State Charity Drive” in which students were given the opportunity to donate to local charities of various causes or to donate money to the government. During this project the group distributed SFL’s most recent book, After the Welfare State, and displayed posters demonstrating the inefficiency of government welfare programs. The Young Americans for Liberty at MSU organize weekly student-led presentations. These presentations have ranged from “Culture, Innovation, and the Impact of Ideas on Society” to “Energy Liberation.”

Crowd of 4,000+ to see Congressman Ron Paul.

Finally, as the 2012 election neared, they painted “Nobody 2012” on “the rock” in the middle of MSU’s campus to demonstrate the frustration with the choices for president and that “Nobody” would be a better candidate. MSU also hosted the SFL Michigan Regional Conference which drew a remarkable number of attendees.

SFL has always been focused on growing the student movement for liberty in the United States. There are more leaders, groups, and activities in the US than anywhere else. As part of a further investment in the US and broader North American activities, SFL is forming a North American Regional Executive Board to provide leadership focused exclusively on the region for 2013-2014. The individuals serving on this board are all people who have received previous SFL leadership training. These outstanding individuals have proven their qualifications in starting groups, developing other leaders, and running successful campus events. SFL is ready to empower them to oversee the growth of activities across North America.

NORTH AMERICAN CAMPUS COORDINATOR PROGRAM

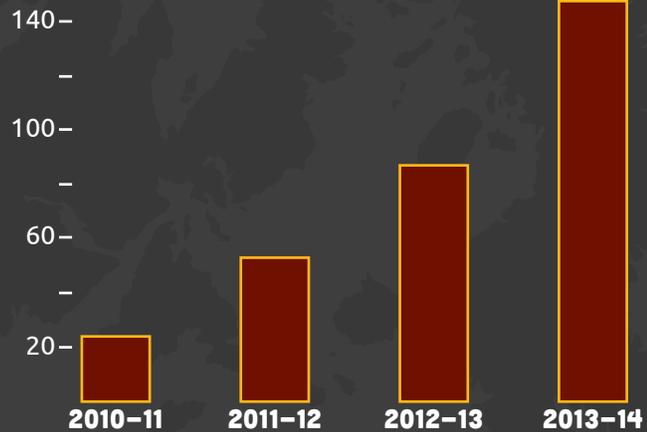

SFL's Campus Coordinator (CC) Program is the premiere leadership support and training initiative in the student movement for liberty. Now entering its fourth year, the CC Program is a driving force behind both the exponential growth of the student movement and the successful execution of SFL events and programs. Prior to starting their work as campus revolutionaries, CCs are put through a rigorous summer training program that consists of numerous readings, virtual lectures, written assignments, and a three-day retreat in Washington, DC. Every element of the training program is designed to ground new SFL leaders in the intellectual foundations of liberty as well as provide them with the practical knowledge and skills they will need to successfully advance the cause of liberty on campus.

CCs are tasked with the challenge of shifting the climate of intellectual opinion on campus.

To this end, each CC sets tangible goals to seek out other existing libertarian students to join SFL's network, start new pro-liberty student groups on campuses in their region, host and assist with pro-liberty student events, and distribute SFL resources to students and student groups they work with.

The principles of free markets, personal liberty, and peace are becoming part of the conversation on college campuses. At no time in recent history have the ideas of liberty been more popular amongst young people than now. SFL's Campus Coordinators are a key reason for that. They are the leaders on the ground fighting to promote the ideas of liberty and are first responders to the threat of statism on campuses.

My academic research has been energized as I’ve journeyed into past episodes of human behavior to discover how freedom—or oppression—is always the fulcrum upon which human events turn. The farther I travel in this way of discovery, my optimism for humanity’s future and its deep embrace of the value of emergent orders versus imposed planning grows. Without Students For Liberty and the curiosity that it has stimulated in me, I would be a lost wanderer; or worse yet, I would be standing completely still”

LIBERTY FUND SYMPOSIA

Starting in 2011, Students For Liberty partnered with the Liberty Fund, Inc. to host a new project for students with a passion for developing their intellectual understanding of liberty – The Students For Liberty and Liberty Fund Symposia: Exploring the Foundations of a Free Society. These are unique opportunities for top students who are interested in pursuing careers in academia. Through a rigorous application process, SFL selects 15 outstanding students to attend each Liberty Fund Symposia. Each participant completes a set of readings in preparation for a weekend of Socratic discussions with an expert professor in that field.

This year SFL hosted three symposia with top intellectual leaders of liberty:

“The Institutions of Liberty”

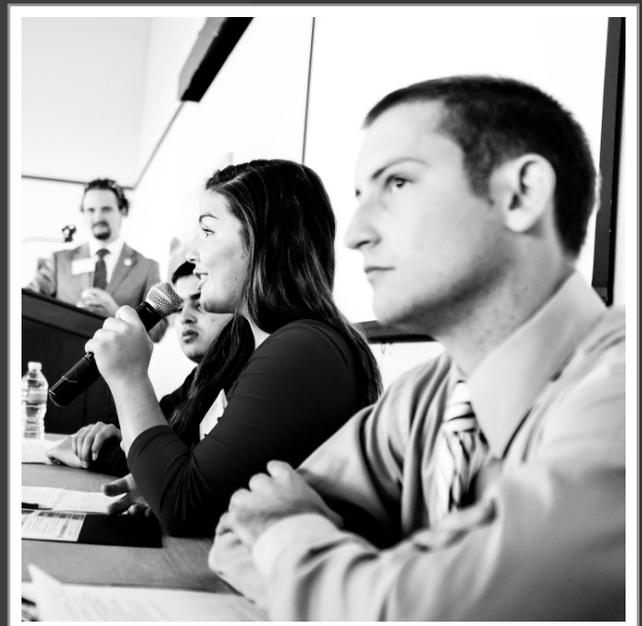

Discussion lead by David Schmdtz of The University of Arizona

The students went through rigorous training and are now starting new pro-liberty groups from France to Greece to Albania.

One of the best examples of the growth of SFL in Latin America is Estudiantes por la Libertad Ecuador. Born as a direct result of Students For Liberty’s Charter Teams Program, EsLibertad Ecuador quickly grew to become a powerhouse organization.

EsLibertad Ecuador has 5 groups across the country and has 11 students selected for the 2013-2014 Charter Teams Program.

BASIC PRINCIPLES FOR A FREE SOCIETY

A key step for the growth of the organization was a three day seminar on liberty related topics at Escuela Superior Politécnica del Litoral in Guayaquil from November 13-15, 2012. The group planned and hoped for 150 students, but by the end of the seminar, 374 individuals had participated to learn more about the philosophy of liberty.

After the seminar, EsLibertad Ecuador organized two movie forums; one at Guayaquil on intellectual property with the movie “Everything is a Remix” and one in the city of Cuenca on entrepreneurship and economic freedom with the movie “Emprendedores Latinoamericanos.” Both events had over 80 students in attendance. EsLibertad Ecuador also hosts regular Forums for Freedom.

EsLibertad Ecuador is launching a Visibility Campaign to spread the basic ideas of liberty across campuses. The group will provide students in the area with customizable flyers to increase the awareness of pro-liberty groups on campuses.

Due to their success this past year, EsLibertad Ecuador won the 2013 Students For Liberty Student Group of the Year Award.

ESTUDANTES PELA LIBERDADE

Estudantes Pela Liberdade was formed by a group of Brazilian students in early 2012 to replicate the success of Students For Liberty in the US and Europe. Over the course of the 2012-2013 school year, Students For Liberty-International and Estudantes Pela Liberdade worked closely to integrate the two organizations with leadership trainings, mutual strategic planning, and the provision of resources for students across Brazil. For the 2013-2014 school year, Estudantes Pela Liberdade will serve as the Brazilian outreach arm of Students For Liberty-International.

The SFL Charter Teams Program seeks to build the student movement for liberty around the world by identifying, training, and supporting the strongest student leaders of liberty in areas currently underserved by SFL, which in 2012-2013 encompassed any area outside the United States, Canada, and Europe. Participants undergo a rigorous two-month online training program covering the philosophy of liberty, management skills, communications, and SFL's best practices in student organizing. Students then form Charter Teams in their regions to start student groups at nearby universities, run events that educate others on the meaning of liberty, and identify other pro-liberty student leaders. Charter Team members create long-lasting, meaningful mechanisms of supporting pro-liberty students in their countries.

2012-2013 CHARTER TEAM SUCCESSES

In 2012-2013, the Charter Teams Program featured 26 members from 14 countries on five continents including Venezuela, Peru, Paraguay, Nigeria, Kazakhstan, India, Guatemala, Georgia, El Salvador, Ecuador, Costa Rica, Brazil, Australia, and Armenia. Here are some of the highlights:

Established 42 pro-liberty organizations in new countries.

Conferences with 50+ attendees run in Ecuador, Venezuela, Georgia, Kazakhstan, and Nigeria.

Leadership Forums on pro-liberty activism with 12+ student leaders run in Guatemala, Armenia, Georgia, and Nigeria.

Liberty debate societies with 50+ students involved in both Costa Rica and Georgia.

Essay contests on liberty with 20+ student essays run in Nigeria, India, and Armenia.

ANNUAL SFL AWARDS

STUDENT OF THE YEAR: NOELLE MANDELL

Noelle attends Houston Community College and recognized early that the typical model of student activism would not work at a commuter school. She started a Liberty On The Rocks chapter with over 40 people meeting every two weeks.

STUDENT GROUP OF THE YEAR: ESTUDIANTES POR LA LIBERTAD ECUADOR

In a country where little student activism for liberty existed, EPLL Ecuador managed to successfully organize and rally 150 students for a conference in Guayaquil with no institutional support.

EVENT OF THE YEAR: "A LETTER FROM JONATHAN GULLIBLE" HOSTED BY AFRICAN LIBERTY STUDENTS ORGANIZATION

Drama is a very effective tool for communication in Africa, so ALSO at the University of Ibadan produced a play to introduce the ideas of individual liberty and tolerance to schools in West Africa.

STUDENTS FOR LIBERTY BOOK PROJECT: AFTER THE WELFARE STATE

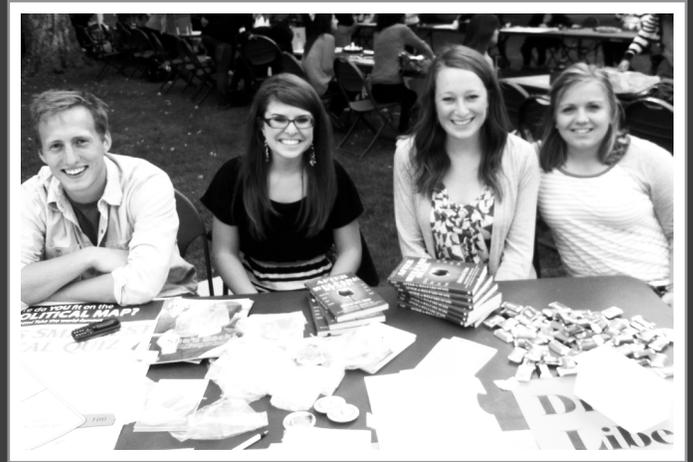

Beginning in 2010, SFL began publishing an annual book in partnership with the Atlas Network. The purpose of the book is to provide a high-quality introduction to the ideas of liberty for young people that can be mass-marketed to students around the world. SFL does not sell the book. It is given away to students and groups for free on the condition that they distribute the books to others at their school to spread the ideas of liberty. This strategy flies in the face of the traditional belief that people only value what they pay for, and it has produced dramatic results. The demand from students for these books increased so much that after printing 125,000 copies of After the Welfare State, SFL ran out of books within two months and had to print another 50,000 copies to keep up with requests.

HOW DOES SFL KNOW THIS PROJECT IS A SUCCESS?

- Increasing demand from student groups for the books as a resource to expand their groups.
- Anecdotal evidence from student groups saying these have been helpful in attracting members and getting their message out.
- Increased numbers of conference attendees and requests for other resources.
- The use of these books by college professors in curricula and high school teachers in their classrooms.

Three years ago Dr. Kevin Culberson began using The Economics of Freedom in his senior economics class at Covenant Christian Academy in Colleyville, TX. He now not only incorporates the books into his teachings every year, but unlike most high school texts, actually gives a copy to every student for their continued use in college and beyond.

WEBINARS

Students For Liberty was one of the first pro-liberty organizations to utilize webinar technology to provide high-quality online lectures on the foundations of a free society to students on a regular basis. For 2012-2013, SFL continued the webinar program’s success by hosting 33 webinars for 1,324 attendees. To reach a new demographic of viewers, SFL began to organize webinars specifically for students in Europe, hosted at a time more convenient for students across the pond every other week. As a result, SFL has been able to spread the ideas of liberty to many more students who otherwise would not have been able to access such valuable information.

“The Moral Arc of Science”
Presented by Michael Shermer

The arc of the moral universe bends toward truth, justice, freedom, and prosperity thanks to science—the type of thinking that involves reason, rationality, empiricism, and skepticism. The Scientific Revolution led by Copernicus, Galileo, and Newton was so world-changing that thinkers in other fields consciously aimed at revolutionizing the social, political, and economic worlds using the same methods of science. This led to the Age of Reason and the Enlightenment, which in turn created the modern secular world of democracies, rights, justice, and liberty.

“Freedom Through Technology: Making an End-Run Around the State” Presented by Jeffrey Tucker

If the government had known what would happen, would the Internet have been privatized in 1995? Maybe not. It has been a zone of freedom in a world of despotism, and it has been the font of a dazzling display of human creativity. Its contribution to economic prosperity and human freedom has been mighty. And it’s not just about hardware and software. It’s about those crucial market institutions of communication, learning, and creativity. The digital world has allowed humanity to loosen the chains just enough to give us a glimpse of the wonders of liberty itself.

ACTIVISM RESOURCES

Students For Liberty's activism kits provide students with the resources to promote pro-liberty issues on their campuses. In 2011-2012, the only such resources available for students were the SFL Tabling Kits and Free Speech Kits. For 2012-2013, SFL added to these resources with kits designed to introduce Objectivism to student groups and promote an understanding of drug policy. The resulting demand for these resources showed dramatic growth from the previous year.

ACTIVISM KITS DELIVERED

“The resources in SFL’s activism kits helped my group raise awareness on our campus about free speech and drug policy. Knowing that other groups across the US were doing the same thing inspired us to work even harder.”

- Zachary Slaybak
University of Pennsylvania

Student groups use 'pot brownies' to protest War on Drugs

Students don't give up their support for liberty upon graduation, and SFL doesn't give up support for individuals when they graduate either. To keep individuals involved with the student movement for liberty when they are no longer students, SFL launched Alumni For Liberty.

ALUMNI FOR LIBERTY PROJECT: WOMEN FOR LIBERTY

The goal of Women For Liberty is to encourage more women to become part of the liberty movement and help women advance to higher leadership positions within the liberty movement.

This past year WFL hosted the inaugural WFL Leadership Summit and organized several happy hours and events where young women were able to meet one another and network with their more experienced counterparts in the liberty movement. At the International Conference, WFL sponsored a session on "Closing the Libertarian Gender Gap: Reaching Out to Women on Your Campus." The panel was moderated by Kennedy, a former MTV VJ and a contributor to Reason Magazine. The session drew over 100 attendees eager to learn and discuss more ways to bring women into the movement.

Students For Liberty would like to thank all of the donors who have made our work possible. The generous men and women who contribute to our efforts are an important part of the SFL team. From everyone at Students For Liberty, thank you for your dedication to liberty and to creating a freer future.

SALOMON-MORRIS SOCIETY

Students For Liberty launched the Salomon-Morris Society to recognize and reward some of liberty’s most dedicated supporters, those who have made an annual contribution of $5,000 or more. The society is named after Hyman Salomon and Robert Morris, two of the principal financiers of the American Revolution. Without their inspiring dedication to the cause of liberty, the US would never have been able to become a free and independent country. Similarly, without the support of these members, Students For Liberty would be unable to offer the many resources and opportunities to students that we do:

Students For Liberty is one of the most impressive organizations I have seen come about in a long time, and is a leading force in spreading the ideas of liberty to young people. I consider SFL to be critical to the future of liberty.

OWL SOCIETY

“Older, Wiser Libertarians” (OWLs) are stalwarts of the liberty movement. They have fought with distinction for many years in the battle for liberty, and have the experience and expertise needed to develop the best strategies for creating a free society. The OWL Society consists of those who provide monthly contributions to SFL to offer a continuous flow of income and maintain strong relationships with SFL.

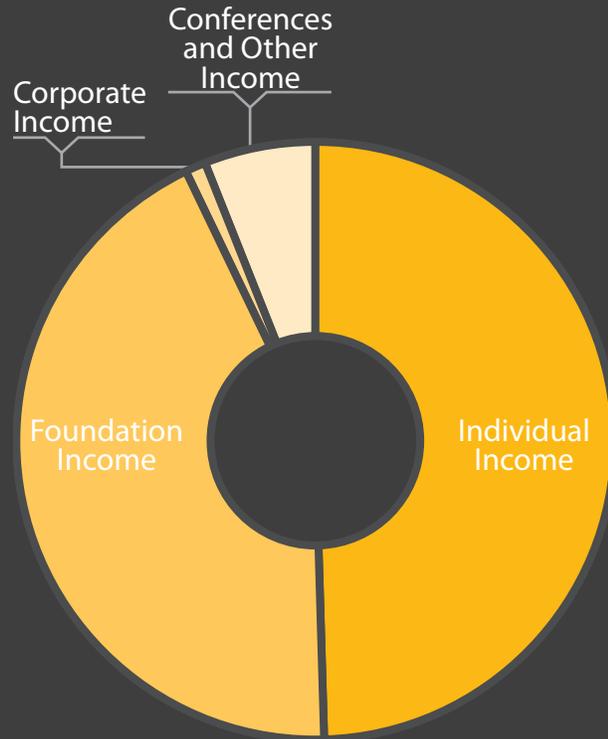

If you would like to join the ranks of the Owl Society, please visit this webpage and pledge a monthly gift of $20 or more:

<https://studentsforliberty.org/donate/join-the-owl-society/>

The unaudited financial information below shows that for a fifth year in a row, SFL’s budget grew substantially to keep up with the growing demand for pro-liberty resources. Expenses and income both approximately doubled from the previous fiscal year. SFL is in a sound financial position to make greater investments for the future of liberty and continue supporting an ever-growing student movement for liberty with an increased budget next year. SFL’s fiscal year runs May through April.
